THEME

It was related by the Celts that in ancient times a fabulous king named Arthur established a fellowship consisting of the most valiant and virtuous men of that time. This fellowship developed into the Knights of the Round Table. His castle housed the prospective knights, and therein was a schedule fashioned to develop in them all the virtuous habits and the powerful physique essential for a successful quest of the Holy Grail.

Since King Arthur's order proved very successful in creating persons of strong character, it is easily understood why a later fellowship like that of us Seniors, who are striving to attain the same great heights as our predecessors, should wish to identify ourselves with the knights in the days of old. Because we respect the traditions of the Knights of the Round Table we have adopted the King Arthur theme; and the shining walls of our castle, Wilton Academy, resound with our cry of "Follow the Gleam". The Gleam is our conscience—that perpetual spark which glows with ever-increasing intensity as it serves to guide us along the golden stairway to success.

Our castle has been an excellent setting for the mental, physical, and spiritual growth of us young knights. Our company is not now so large as when we entered as pages and squires, but we have retained our undaunted spirit. Just as the hardest knight required occasional diversion from court life, our curriculum is spiced with banquets and festivities which are struck off with every bit as much gaiety and colorfulness as those in the old days. We Seniors have become able participants in these festivities; our class boasts its share of bards and minstrels, and more than one bold knight has sallied forth to the tournament ground where he has successfully defended the castle's honor.

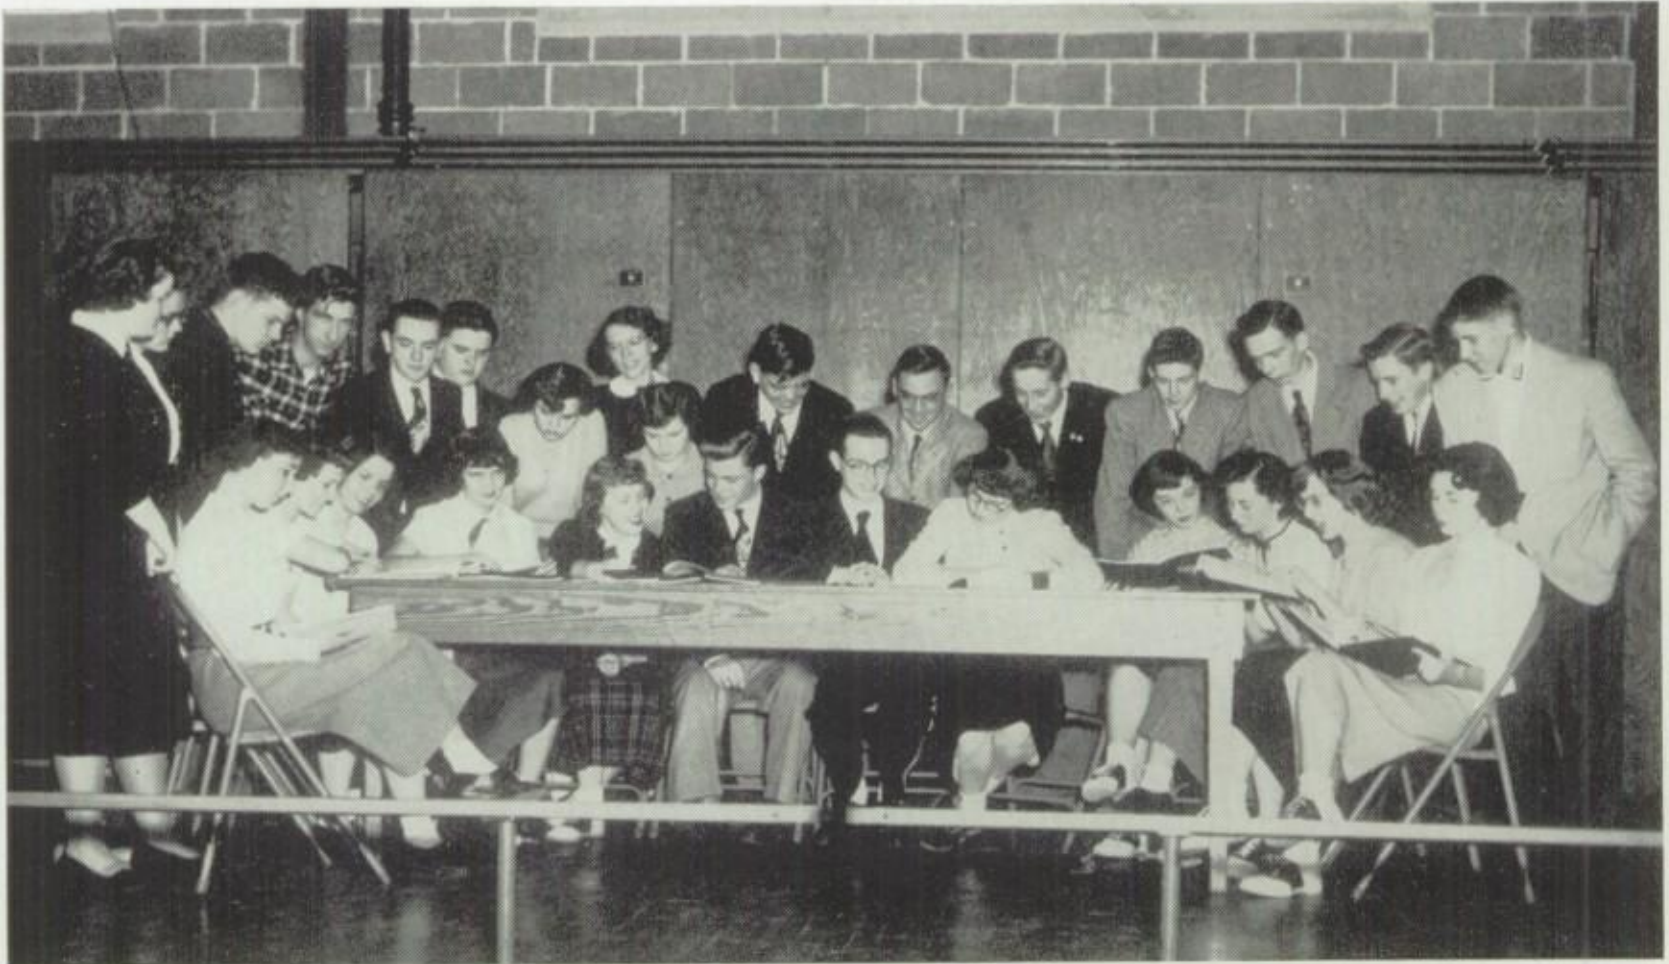

To the tutors who have carefully watched over us and led us across the rough spots, we extend our sincerest gratitude; for without their expert guidance we could never have attained the confidence necessary to thrust ourselves vigorously into the world.

We pledge ourselves to the underclassmen, although at times we may have seemed rather haughty to them. We shall watch their progress with interest as they follow the paths which we have traversed before them, and we shall be ready to offer assistance when they are distressed.

A tribute also to the townspeople, whose loyal attendance at our castle's functions has contributed tremendously to its success.

Soon each member of our class will be knighted, and he will receive a scroll which will open a new world to him. With a sadness in his heart he will bid farewell to his beloved castle and to those whom he is leaving behind. This volume is a record, drawn up as accurately and as interestingly as possible, in the hope that the achievements of our class will be remembered as favorably as the legend of King Arthur.

As Juniors this year we came trouping into school in September looking ahead to our next-to-last year of high school. Soon after school opened we elected for class officers the following: President — Bernal Allen; Vice President — James Wentworth; Secretary — Janice Trask; Treasurer — Alayne Carignan. Since the end of our sophomore year we have lost two members making our present enrollment forty-five. We also elected James Wentworth our new Student Council Member.

With our class trip as an objective, we have been working diligently to earn sufficient money by sponsoring three dances, a food sale, and selling stationery and Christmas wrapping paper. On November 5 we presented a one-act play, "Special Guest", a drama which was competently directed by Mrs. Eugene Hunter.

Our class has been well represented in many other school activities. I hope next year will be as successful as this one has been.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

The Sophomore Class

As we started the second fourth of our journey to the top we had fifty-six members trying to make the steep grade. During the first week of our journey we elected these class officers to lead us: President — Stephen Mayo; Vice President — Norman Beisaw; Secretary — Leanne Franchetti; Treasurer — Robert Ridley; New Student Council Members — Adrian Wells, Stephen Getchell, and Leanne Franchetti.

The Sophomores started the dances off with a bang when they sponsored the "Autumn Frolic" on September 29. On January 5, we were sponsors of the "Second Annual Snowball Dance". A workday has also been a means of raising money.

Many members of our class have played basketball this past season. We were also well represented in football and field hockey.

We presented "Three's A Crowd" as our one act play with Miss Young as director. Diane Spaulding, Connie Casler, Norman Beisaw, Stephen Mayo, and Albert Hall were in the cast.

Our class is looking forward with great anticipation to next fall, when we begin the third quarter of our journey toward graduation.

The Freshman Class

This is Station FWA (Freshmen of Wilton Academy) reviewing some of the historical events for the past school year of the class of 1955.

First I should like to introduce our class officers: President — Bradley Lothrop; Vice President — Henry Richard; Secretary — Donald Fletcher; Treasurer — Milton Farrington; Student Council Member — Bradley Lothrop.

On September 5, 1951, fifty-six "green" freshmen stepped through the portals of Wilton Academy. As we looked around it seemed that everyone was watching us with claws sharpened.

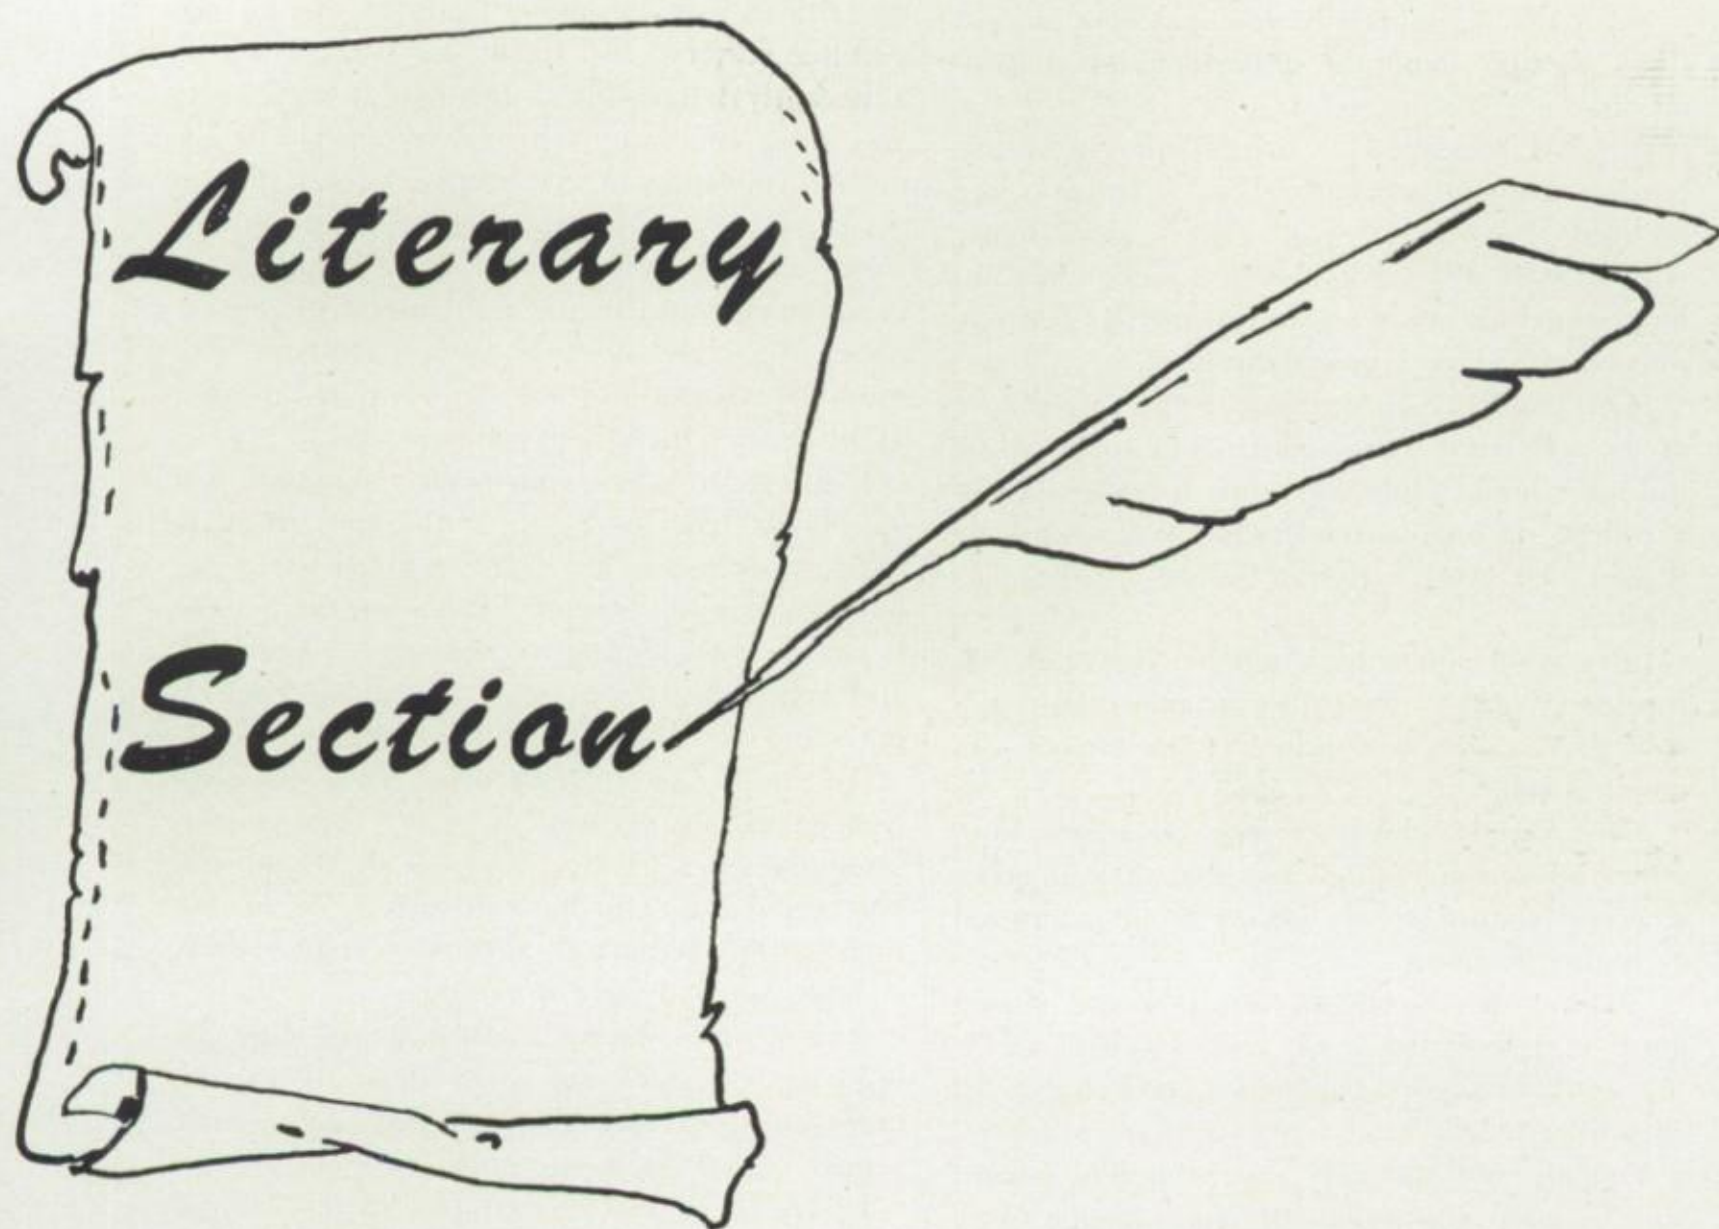

We were asked (told) to do all kinds of crazy stunts, but we managed to survive.

October 20 was set for the "crucial" date when all the freshmen took it on the chin.

Our school life does not end at 2:30, but with the last bell you will see students dashing off in all different directions to report for band, athletic practices, and various other activities in which our class takes an active part.

Our class also presented the one-act play "A Date for Bobby Sox" under the direction of Mrs. Hatfield. Those taking part were Joline Trask, Anne Gould, Irene Stinson, Bradley Adams, and Donald Fletcher.

Well, our time (space) is up so station FWA will sign off, but before we go please remember that next year we will be heard over a new station, SWA (Sophomores of Wilton Academy), we hope!

THE IMPORTANCE OF AN EDUCATION

Many people, especially young people, do not think enough about the importance of an education.

A good education is one of the most important things in a person's life. It is much like building a house. If you want a good house you must build a good solid foundation, and likewise if you wish a good prosperous life you must first receive a good education.

Many students do not realize the importance of the scholastic record which they make while in high school. Only when one is ready to enter a college or university does he realize that he should have taken better advantage of his opportunity.

Fifty years ago a high school education was considered good; but now, in many places, a college education is required before anyone can obtain a job.

Many people who have received only a high school education will tell you that they, if given a second chance, would go on to an institution of higher learning.

Those with a college education are almost positive of receiving a job with excellent working conditions, good pay, and a good chance for advancement.

You are not the only one who will benefit from a good education. It is the people with the higher education who help with the entire country, industrially, economically, and politically.

PUDDLE DAYS

Puddle days again are here;
Splash! Splatter! Oh-h-h dear!
After all, "fella", you could slow down;
There's not that much rush and this is in the town.

In the morning on one side, at night on the other,
I'm learning the best way is just run for cover,
For puddle days again are here;
Splash! Splatter! Oh-h-h dear!

STUDYING

My Grandfather has often told me that to get ahead you must study hard and that after a while you will enjoy it. For years I have been trying to prove this to myself, but to no avail.

Enjoying studying is something people just don't do, although it has been included among the peculiar customs and habits for years.

Recently I have found out that it is the way you go at something which determines whether or not you enjoy it. Everyone knows that to get anything out of studying he must concentrate. Having the radio on helps. It puts your mind at ease and in the right mood to concentrate. To really do your best at studying you must have something to eat. There is no point at all in studying if you can't eat, too.

If it is getting past your bedtime and you still have your hair to do up, with some studying left to do, this can be easily remedied by doing both at the same time. This is most easily done if you have something to memorize. The book and bobbypins are in your lap, a lunch is on the stand beside you, and the radio is on.

An evening of studying wouldn't be complete without calling up some friends. The conversation usually starts by asking for an assignment, but before long you have discussed the current topics of the day as well as those to come. Well, at least you had good intentions.

Among the many annoyances of life are brothers, especially the kind that discuss last night's or next week's basketball game after supper, and I guess this includes them all.

I have been thinking seriously of inventing a machine to do my studying for me. But, until I do, I guess I will have to do my studying the way people have for years. Concentration is the basis element in studying!! Some day, I am sure, the human race won't be bothered by the unwelcome art of studying.

TWILIGHT

The sun sinks slowly in the west,
Placing all the world at rest.
It seems as if the God above
Shows to us his gracious love
By giving us the night and day,
To learn to live, to work, and play.

HOW TO TRAIN A WATCHDOG

The following method applies only to dogs under fifty years of age because dogs older than that are too old to learn anything in the first place.

To begin with, it is imperative that the person who is training the dog know more than the dog does. An I. Q. test would be appropriate at this stage although it might be embarrassing to the trainer. One of the first things that the dog should be made to understand is that you are his master. If he has any doubts about this you should have a bill of sale made up and show it to him. When he has learned this, you introduce a fixed set of commands which you use all the time so that he will not become confused. If he doesn't understand all the commands, you can always buy him a dictionary. Next, he should be told which people are to be trusted and which are your enemies. This can easily be done by putting a sign containing the word "bad" on the backs of all the people that you don't happen to like. Sometimes watchdogs have a tendency to sleep when they should be on guard. If your dog does this you can cure him by taking away his sleeping pills.

After your dog has mastered the fundamentals which are listed above you may begin to teach him specialties, such as smoking a pipe, driving the family car, or whatever he is best suited to. At the end of six months you will have either the best watchdog in the country or a dead dog.

SPRING AGAIN

After a cold, long winter
When our hearts are very low,
Spring comes again to cheer us
And melts away the snow.

Birds from the South come back again
And sing their sweet love song;
The sun again shines brighter
And revives us all day long.

The flowers then begin to bud;
The trees sprout leaves of green;
The brooks start flowing once again,
And merry fish are seen.

In the spring this land of mine
Looks very beautiful to me,
With mountain roads and pastures green
As far as the eye can see.

Cows, horses, goats, and sheep,
All grazing now without a fear,
Hold this happy thought in mind —
That winter's gone for another year,

SOME PEOPLE

Some people are short;
Some people are tall.
Some people are fun;
Some people are dull.
I'm shy!

Some people are happy;
Some people are sad.
Some people are grouchy;
Some people are glad.
I don't care!

Some people have long hair;
Some people have short.
Some people have red hair;
Some people have not.
Mine's brown!

Some people are "Vanderbilts";
Some people are "Tchaikovskies".
Some people are "Napoleons";
Some people are "monkeys".
I'm Dicky!

ON STUDYING

Do you like to study? — Well, do you? —
Don't hesitate to say "no" because I don't either!

Why do they have to go and ruin a perfectly good day! I came to school this morning, feeling the effects of spring; the birds, the blue sky, and the sun, all whispered the good news of spring's arrival. Ah, spring! It's wonderful!

The next scene is the study hall, and I don't think you can find me in that monstrous pile of books that makes the desk top sag. Let's see,
French, Geometry, Latin, Algebra, History,
Civics, English; the time has come for wading in, and by the looks, knee deep. Oh, why, why, dear books, don't you help me? They lie there grinning at me; look at the titles, forming smiles that glare at me, even in my dreams.

Well, I might's well do something. I know,
I wonder what Dick Tracy's doing today.
Come on, June, let's take a trip to the newspaper shelf. Nothing like reading an educational newspaper in your spare time.

Back at my desk — "You know, June," says
my conscience, "you'd better do some studying.
You wouldn't like to stay after school, would you?" Go away conscience, you bother me!
Mm-m, maybe I ought to do something creative

— this compass looks inviting enough. Circles, blocks, squares, parallelograms, whee, what fun!! Psst, Virginia, look what I drew! — She's too busy studying.

Two-thirty, and nothing done. Here I go home with arms full of books — it would be three arms full if I had another lengthy limb.

Homework, homework, homework, and the end not in sight! You know, I think I've got — Spring Fever!

OH, TO BE A SENIOR

I

Oh, to be a Senior, I thought three years ago,
When I was but a Freshman, and things went,
oh, so slow.

I thought we'd ne'er survive that year,
Our treatment was real rough;
Those conceited upperclassmen
Could really make it tough.

II

Oh, to be a Senior, I thought two years ago,
When I was but a Sophomore, and things went,
oh, so slow.

It truly was a mighty treat
To have a class below;
We could tell them, like big brothers
The things they ought to know.

III

Oh, to be a Senior, I thought one year ago,
When I was but a Junior, and things went, oh,
so slow.

We learned what it was to study;
The lessons were a fright.
The teachers piled on the homework,
And we'd study half the night.

IV

Now we all are Seniors, and ev'rywhere we go,
We hear the underclassmen say, "The days go,
oh, so slow."

Now let me tell you, boys and girls,
Despite your much-told strife,
The years you spend at W. A.
Are the happiest of your life.

QUEER NAMES FOR DOMESTIC ANIMALS

Good Christian people, it seems to me, wish subconsciously to endow their children with names that will bring attention, just in case their children don't happen to become distinguished in other ways. However, since their ego won't permit them to admit that their offspring might not become well-known, they give them names like John and Mary, hoping, with fingers crossed, that fortune will smile upon them in other aspects of life.

This is not the case at all when one is naming animals. In this field one may let his imagination run amuck. Notice the few dogs named John or cats named Mary. No sense of pity is manifested toward what the animal might feel about being given some name that is completely inappropriate to its personality. In fact, I believe that people name their pets in such a way as to make up for all the times they have come home to find dog hairs on the best chair.

This point is easily demonstrated. I am acquainted with a very pleasant old gentleman, who has a passion for that singular creature, the hamster. His present stock consists of two, whom he has named Tubby and Ladybird. This is somewhat inappropriate, as the two in question are both gentlemen hamsters, thin as rats.

Several years ago, my father bought twelve baby chicks as pets. Our care was so beneficial to their growth that soon we had two, named Archibald and Gertrude. Some time later, we were rather surprised to discover that Archibald had developed the curious habit of laying eggs.

There are, in addition to those mentioned above, several stock types. I refer to the menacingly large wolf-hound named Dolly, the maiden-aunt cat named Snookums, and the docile pony called Dragonfly. Such errors of judgment are far from uncommon.

I feel certain that these examples will convince the reader that animal pets are not always sanely named. In fact, quite the opposite is usually the case. However, such a point is hardly worth the trouble taken to explain it, for who is going to change his ways, unless it be the animals themselves?

James Armstrong '52

SOLITUDE

There's something great in solitude
That tends to hypnotize,
To overpower the strongest will;
The victor has a prize.
It offers opportunities
Of tranquil rest in life,
Of prayer and help and thoughtfulness,
Sweet succor from all strife.

I often like to be alone,
Though some may deem it odd,
To rummage through my mem'ry chest,
Or talk a bit with God.

Lois Haley '52

WISHFUL THINKING

All that morning, I was steadily wishing
That instead of working, I could be fishing.
What could be more fun thought I
Than wading 'neath the open sky
And casting flies in some cool place
Where every trout would dart and race?
To get your bait before another
Stole it from him? and then my mother
Called, and asked if the baby was sleeping;
I looked at him and he was peeping
From under his blanket as if to say
"Too bad, Brother, you stay home today."

Maybe some day when brother grows up
I won't have to wish;
I'll go right out and cut a pole
And catch myself a fish.

MY TRIP TO MARS

It was a fine spring day during our April vacation when two of my friends and I decided to take a trip to Mars. (Oh, don't look so shocked! A trip to Mars isn't anything unusual!) We started working on a rocketship in a garage on a deserted farm above ours. After many sleepless nights our rocketship was completed, not an Al job, I assure you, but a rocketship, nevertheless.

Finally, the night for the big takeoff arrived with just a few qualms and shivers. A big moon hung low in a dark, ominous-looking sky. Not a star was to be seen, and an angry wind howled through the treetops. Not a very cheerful night to be taking off for Mars, I thought to myself as we climbed to our places in the rocket. Betty pulled the stick, and with a roar we started off on the strangest adventure of our lives.

Up, up through the dark clouds we flew: 500, 1000, 1500! Upward, ever upward we went. The moon flew by and a million little things which looked like small white pebbles. Finally the terrible roar and rocking ceased and we looked down on earth far away. A big fiery ball suddenly shot by the window and Joanna let out a scream of fear. In a minute we were all clinging to one another in fright and, oh, how we wished our feet were on good old solid earth again!

As we crowded around the window, a big white fiery ball seemed to be hurtling straight at us. We held our breaths as it came closer and closer. Then came a deafening shattering sound. Silence, a deep oppressive silence.

I stirred; my neck felt cramped, and sharp pains shot through my legs and arms. Slowly I opened my eyes, expecting to see the terrible people of Mars gathered around our wrecked craft. Then I sat up quick and blinked. Joanna and Betty were curled up on our old couch, sound asleep. The half-finished rocketship was collapsed on the floor among pieces of glass from the broken garage window. Well, anyhow, that accounted for the crashing noise. Outside, the wind howled, thunder clapped, and rain pelted against the garage roof. But what did it matter, I thought to myself as I relaxed against the wall. It was such a relief to know that it was just a dream.

As for that trip to Mars, well, I think I'll stick to good old earth.

SNOW

The soft white snow floats to the ground,
Formed in various patterns, both square and round.

It falls from heavenward, this crystal-like snow;
A land unknown to us creatures below.

The fence post's a man with a hat of pure white,
And the lane is a highway sparkling and bright.
There stands a fortress down by the gate;
How could snow flakes so small make a bulwark so great?

Snow adds a magic touch to all the world,
And gives the effect of giant-sized pearl;
The snow has ceased falling after covering the earth;

The glistening world lies still after its new birth.

Sally Ann Holmes '52

SPRING

Mother Nature, late last fall, put her children to bed for the winter. Now it's spring and everything is waking up. The world is turning green, and everything smells clean once more.

Spring is the time of year that people like to be out-of-doors. The air is brisk but warm, and you feel good inside and out.

Most people like to take long walks, watch the brooks overflowing with excess water (which only comes in the spring), and pick fragrant spring flowers.

Being out-of-doors and seeing the green buds on the trees (knowing that in a few months, leaves will be covering those very same trees) bring God closer to mankind. You also think of all the blessings and all the things the world and you yourself have to be thankful for.

In my mind nothing is as wonderful and refreshing, after a long hard winter, as spring.

Helene Orcutt '53

THE DIFFERENCE

When little boys are planning fun,
Or for things they are wishin';
They say — "Tomorrow let's play ball,"
Or, "Saturday, let's go fishin'."

When grownup boys have mouths to feed,
It brings a new condition.
It's — "Next year, I shall take that trip,"
Or, "Next year I'll go fishin'."

SERVING HUMANITY

Many of us dream of being "queen for a day." As a child we want to be a cowboy, movie star, or even a prince or princess, as the case may be.

However, as I have grown older I've begun to realize that there can be great joy and satisfaction in serving others. There is all too much sickness and suffering in the world, and the need for nurses is great. Many people are willing to help on a special day, such as Thanksgiving, Easter, or Christmas. But after taking their basket of gifts, they feel their work is done.

This spirit of helpfulness is good, but it is not enough. I want to help every day and not just on special occasions. There are many good ways that one can help to serve humanity. However, I think that in nursing one can be of greatest help. As a nurse it is possible to help those sick of soul and of body. Some of the duties and privileges include drying the tears from a child's eye, making an old lady clean and comfortable, and witnessing the pride and joy in the eyes of a new father and mother. Yes, the nurse enjoys a full and happy life by serving humanity.

THE WIND

The wind howls o'er the hilltops
And swoops through the valley so low;
I sit 'neath the trees to listen
For I love to hear it blow.

In the storm it screams like a madman,
So strong, so lusty, so swift.
At night it's as soft as a maiden's cheek,
And its cool touch is like her kiss.

In the morning it's cool and refreshing,
At mid-day, like Satan's breath,
It withers all that it touches
Like a messenger of death.

The wind has such varied moods,
It's fickle and unsure;
That is why I love the wind,
Which, like me, must go to another shore.

MY FIRST DRIVING EXPERIENCE

My father taught me to drive our car on a back road. As he turned the wheel over to me, he told me not to speed.

I was all excited, not knowing what to do first. Dad told me the procedure, and I followed his instructions. I pushed in the clutch, turned on the switch, and pushed the starter while feeding some gas. Then Dad told me to let up on the clutch, which I did. The car gave a jerk and stalled. I started the engine again, this time letting out the clutch more slowly. After I had started off, Dad told me to push in the clutch and he would shift. Then, when we were going a little faster, I shifted. Boy, were we traveling! I took my eyes off the road for a second to look at the speedometer. Ten miles an hour, it said. Wow!

We came to a stop sign, so I put my foot on the brake and pushed. We stopped!! When I started, I stalled the engine again, but I soon had it running all right.

I saw a car coming so I steered way out to the side of the road to give him plenty of room. I surely did.

When we finally got the car off the stone wall at 9:30 that night and had paid for the wrecker, I decided I had had enough driving for one day.

AN IDEAL FRIEND

What is a real friend? A real friend is one you know, like, and trust; and he, in turn, feels the same way toward you.

Must he be a genius or wizard in everything? Why, of course not. He is the one who is ready and willing to help and cheer you in time of need, one who is always sociable and friendly to everyone, and one with whom you have similar interests.

Is he the best and most expensively dressed? Not necessarily, because neatness and cleanliness are certainly more important.

Does he say unpleasant things that may hurt others or is he tactful? He should be tactful, sincere, and talk in a pleasant tone of voice.

Are his actions and language something to be proud of? An unselfish and generous person who is always fair and is a very good sport is nice company to have. An ideal friend has good manners and a courteous way. Of course he is cooperative, appreciative, and conscientious and his vocabulary is of good standing. Does he lose his temper every so often? No, he has self-control, patience, and a very understanding way.

Some other qualities not to be overlooked are: ambition, courage, determination, and respect. He should have poise and good judgment; a sense of humor should not be lacking, and he certainly must be loyal, honest, truthful, and not too sensitive.

An ideal friend, in short, is an all-round person.

How near an ideal friend are you?

MAINE

To most of us, its rock-bound coast
Is known for many miles around;
And from the woods there comes the host
Of freely whispered, lovely sounds;
Its winding brooks do often sing
Soft lullabies so seldom heard
Except by animals which cling
To its vast banks, and pretty birds
Whose songs are sung beside the lakes
To man who deems this music sweet;
For forest glades, fine shores and lakes
No other state our own can take.
No matter where the tourists rein
They find no better state than Maine.

ON MEN DRIVERS

The men are always complaining about the way women drive, so I have decided to speak up on behalf of the women drivers of whom I am one.

Only a few days ago, I saw one of this town's more prominent male citizens careening down Main Street at a dangerous pace. He was really endangering human lives going at 15 miles per hour. You never know when his car is going to creep up behind you and silently run over you. However, the type of driver mentioned above is not as dangerous as the look-out-here-I-come type of man driver who thinks he owns the road. It seems to me that most men fall into the latter category. They come roaring through the streets with a fiendish glint in their eyes, looking for some unwary pedestrian to step into the road and become mince meat.

Then there is the type who takes half of his parking space and half of the next one when he parks his car, so that there is a large space on either side of his auto, but not enough room (it usually lacks about a foot) to squeeze your car in. You always come upon this situation when you're in a hurry.

I think the worst kind of man driver is the one who always makes what he thinks are funny jokes when he knows there are several women drivers around. He is the person who always makes such a show of being scared when he rides with a woman or when he meets one on the road. Usually he doesn't drive as well as he thinks he does and we women tremble at the very thought of riding with him. He always has to show off, so he screeches around the corners on two wheels and when he stops, slams on the brakes so hard you nearly fly out through the windshield.

In conclusion, I say that although we women may have our little faults, we are more careful, considerate, and especially more courteous than men drivers. If there is anyone who disagrees with me, I would be glad to argue with him any time.

CAMP

Camp's the place where all we boys
Have the grandest time of all,
For there's always something doing,
From early spring 'til fall.

In the spring we go a-fishing
On the pond or in the brook,
Or we do a bit of reading
In a warm and sunny nook.

In the summer there's wild strawberries,
Nothing with them can compare;
And perfume of honey locust
Vies with clover on the air.

Then I like to lie and listen,
While the birds sing in the trees;
Watch the squirrels round our doorstep;
Hear the droning of the bees.

Apples ripening in the orchard,
How the seasons roll around!
This is the time we all go hunting;
Grouse and deer up there abound.

We cook our meals and clean up
With lots of fun and noise;
Our camp is sure a grand place
For just a bunch of boys.

PHONY PHONE-CALLS

To me there is nothing more provoking than a wrong number. It is revolting to have to get out of a shower or bath, run down a flight of stairs, and answer a phone, just to have the joker on the other end of the line say, "Hello, is this Abacrombie Papoofnik?" or something to that effect.

Occasionally when I make a call, I talk for five minutes before realizing that I dialed the wrong number. Once I didn't find out until the next week that I hadn't talked to the one that I intended to.

Sometimes these are not wrong numbers at all, but practical jokers. The other day I received a phone call from a man with a deep voice. When I asked who was calling he replied, "Howard." I curiously asked, "Howard, who?" That was where I made my mistake because the comedian replied, "How would I know?" and hung up. They say that curiosity killed a cat. Well, I was purring for two days after that.

On a recent stay at a hotel in a large city I received a phone call from another room. The speaker said that he was the hotel manager and asked me if the light in the hall outside my door was on. I set down the phone, went out to see that the light was on, and acknowledged it to the caller. I then recognized the voice of a friend as he said, "Well, go blow it out," and hung up the receiver.

People have been known to get everything on the phone from Eskimos to ball games. I understand there is a book on the market on "How to Get the Wrong Number in Ten Easy Lessons." Believe me, it isn't that difficult to get the wrong number. It seems that you always get the wrong number when you are in a hurry or are trying to make an important call.

The average wrong-number caller is a cross between an imbecile and a pinhead with a streak of idiocy. His diet consists of small cacti, yams, and daisy petals from Trinidad. His drink is maple syrup from the palm trees of New Guinea. This is just average. There are, of course, examples of both extremes.

The slogan of the National Association of Phony-Phoners is "Eat, drink, and die for tomorrow you may be merry."

SHAMROCK FROLIC

When it's time for Shamrock Frolic,
All the Seniors start to work,
Making shamrocks, planning menus;
They find no time at all to shirk.

Every Senior does his duty,
For he wants the dance to be
A big success with lots of profit;
The reason is very plain to see.

When the Shamrock Frolic's over,
And the clean-up work is done,
The class has money for its trip,
And everyone's had a lot of fun.

ON RUNNING A DANCE BAND

Oh, no! You don't think it's difficult?
Well, try it sometime.

Most people do not realize the work and responsibility one has to undertake in managing an orchestra.

The first step is the buying of music, which requires a small fortune (about one dollar and twenty-five cents per copy and you need approximately fifty). You have to keep on buying music, too, because people are always requesting new songs.

The second step is hiring players who will be interested and will be willing to sacrifice a little time. That's a job. They usually do fine at first, but, sooner or later, they lose interest. For instance, maybe a play rehearsal or some other special meeting is scheduled that night. Once in a while you'll hire a person who thinks his date is more important or prefers to attend the show that's supposed to be good that night.

After you have formed the orchestra, there's the job of making a name for yourself. You start by offering to play for a Grange or other organization "free", or maybe some organization hears that you are forming an orchestra and gives you an opportunity to play, rewarding you with a collection. Then you finally have enough money to buy some fancy stands (to you, anyway)! At last, someone recognizes the orchestra's ability and hires you for a dance.

The third step is getting prepared for a dance. You must have your music in order, be at the dance center, and have your stands and everything set up, have everyone in tune, and be ready to play on time. Sometimes there's someone late, maybe only a few minutes, but those few minutes seem like hours. Or possibly someone is sick and you have to hire a player. Sometimes you not only have to pay him more but also furnish his transportation.

These are just a few headaches of forming and running an orchestra, "a very few".

SCIENCE

One of the most rewarding experiences a student can have is recognition of a job well done. The science students of W. A. who entered the State fairs this year have had that experience.

At the regional fair held in Lewiston on March 29, the three entrants from Wilton were judged as tops in their fields. Norman Beisaw whose topic was "The Techniques and Results of Pancreatectomy in Rabbits" won first place in the Biology division. William Small placed second in this division with his project, "Bacteria and the Effects of Antibiotics." Fred Braeden won first in the Freshman-Sophomore Exhibits with his Tesla Coil.

These boys will compete in the Finals, held at Colby, against the winners from four other regional fairs. First prize will be a scholarship to any Maine college. First place winners will also be chosen to represent Maine at the New England Science Congress.

Wilton Academy is very proud of her young scientists who have worked many extra hours to achieve this success. We are establishing an enviable record in the scientific field for the future science students to maintain. Another incentive is a recent award to be presented to the science student of Wilton Academy who does the best in Science Fair competition and meets other specified requirements. This is to be a yearly award of $25, called The Clifford Beisaw Science-Fair Award in honor of its originator.

It is difficult to point to any other single activity which is more lasting or beneficial to the student.

HOT LUNCH

The hot lunch program this year has been very well managed under the supervision of Mrs. Ida Melendy and Mrs. Althea Babb. Student helpers were Helen Adams, Ruby Ranger, Leanne Franchetti and Shirley Ellrich.

Wilton Academy's new Cafeteria serves as a pleasant atmosphere for a well balanced diet. Our many thanks go to Mr. Roy Gifford for this wonderful addition to our school.

FRESHMAN RECEPTION

On October 20th, in the new gymnasium, the Freshman reception was held before a large audience of parents, friends, faculty, and students.

Terry Mayo was Master of Ceremonies, and the Social Committee, who planned the reception, were Lois Haley, Jeanne Trask, Glenda Ledger, Myles Brown, and Terry Mayo.

After the Freshmen had finished performing their stunts, refreshments were served. A juke box dance climaxed the evening's fun.

EVENING SCHOOL

During National Education Week, evening school was held here at the Academy. The program consisted of two radio scripts, "Education for Crisis" and "We Must Know Why," with a few Band selections, a performance by the Majorettes and selections sung by the Glee Club.

Following the program, two periods of classes were held, after which refreshments were served to those who attended.

Many friends and parents were present and it is believed that all guests enjoyed themselves.

FOOTBALL

The football team under Coach Slattery had another very successful year as they won six of their nine game schedule.

The team showed splendid teamwork and fine ball-handling, proved by the fact that they had one of the lightest teams ever produced at Wilton Academy.

The season was brought to a successful conclusion on November 10, at Wilton's Colby Athletic Field as they avenged last year's loss to Farmington by whipping the Greyhounds 13-6 and became Franklin County Champs.

Edgar Beisaw and Merritt Welch each received a Wilton Times Most Valuable Player Trophy for the Eagles' most indispensable performers.

BOYS' VARSITY BASKETBALL

This year's Varsity Basketball team had one of the greatest seasons ever enjoyed by an Eagle quintet. During the entire season the boys won eighteen games while losing but five. In the Franklin County Tournament the Eagles won two games before being upset in the final game by the Farmington Greyhounds.

They were also selected to play in the State Tournament held at Sanford. This marked the first time in the history of the Maine Principals Association Tournament that a Wilton Academy team has been so honored.

The Eagles won the Eastern division of the Sun-Journal League and defeated the Western division leaders, the Mexico Pintos, to become league champions.

Coach Hunter's hoopsters did a remarkable job considering their lack of height. The boys made up for this with their aggressive style of play, featuring a fast breaking offense and an ever-pressing man-to-man defense which wore down the opposition game after game.

Seniors Edgar Beisaw and Paul McKeen were the outstanding scorers. These men, together with Charlie Young, another Senior, are the only regulars that will be lost this year by graduation. (Continued on page 49)

Charles Young was the outstanding performer of the W. A. team, and was crowned Carnival King at the annual Carnival Ball.

Paul McKeen and Everett Masterman led the Eagles in the hitting department while Edgar Beisaw was the team's outstanding pitcher.

At this writing Coach Hunter is expecting to have another strong team, which will be built around Paul McKeen, Robert Fletcher, Myles Brown, Dennis Adams, and Bucky Buchanan.

This year the Girls' Athletic Association has been reorganized after having been disbanded for several years. The activities sponsored by the G. A. A. are Field Hockey, Basketball, Basketball Officiating, Volley Ball, Badminton, Ping Pong, Bowling, Cheerleading, Majorettes, Tumbling, and Golf.

The officers this year were as follows:

President Betty Lou Wilkins
Vice-President Barbara Babb
Secretary and Treasurer Leanne Franchetti
Advisor Miss Greenleaf

BOOSTERS' CLUB RALLY

On October 19, before the Livermore game, and before the Farmington game, a rally, sponsored by the Boosters' Club, was held in the new gymnasium. A torchlight parade led by cheerleaders, majorettes, band, the football squad on fire trucks, and members of the Boosters' Club, preceded the rally.

The rally was opened with the national anthem and was followed by cheers, speeches, band selections, and performances by the majorettes. This program was concluded by the singing of the Alma Mater.

BOYS' J.V. BASKETBALL

This season's J.V. Basketball team enjoyed another very successful year as they lost only one game in thirteen starts.

They defeated all the Sun-Journal League J.V. teams plus several other strong opponents. Relland O'Donal, Stephen Mayo, and Stephen Getchell led in the scoring department.

BOYS' FRESHMAN-SOPHOMORE BASKETBALL

This year the Freshman and Sophomore basketball teams combined into one unit and played a ten-game schedule. They won four while dropping six but gained much valuable experience. The group had improved greatly at the season's end and should add many stars to Eagle fives in years to come.

CHEERLEADERS

VARSITY CHEERLEADERS

CHEERLEADERS

The classy W. A. Cheerleaders, aptly named "Precision Personified," received many favorable comments when they performed in the State Tournament this year. Ably coached by Miss Greenleaf and led by Louise Neil, head cheerleader, they added a great deal of color and pep to the athletic events of the year.

This year, for the first time, a J. V. squad of cheerleaders, composed of Freshmen and Sophomores, was organized. They very ably led the cheers at the J. V. contests.

TRACK

Although the 1951 Track team did not have too impressive a won and lost record, it did have several truly outstanding performers.

W. A.'s top attraction and point-getter was their versatile track and field star, Lauren Rollins, who competed in equal ease in the 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, pole vault, high jump, javelin, shot put, discus, and the broad jump. Both he and Phil Rafter were chosen to compete in the New England Track Meet held at Vermont Academy in Vermont. It was the first time in the history of the school that Eagle track stars had been so honored.

THE EAGLE

A black and white illustration on a dark background. In the upper left, a classical building with a portico of columns is shown. In the center, a large, stylized bow is depicted, with a rolled-up scroll or diploma passing through its center. The bow is rendered with detailed shading to show its folds. The scroll has a textured, cylindrical appearance. In the upper right, there are two stylized, fluffy clouds. The entire illustration is set against a solid black rectangular background.
